

Says mini-United Nations

U.S. intervention 'self-serving'

By MICHELLE DILL
Universe Staff Writer

El Salvadorans welcome peace with a leftist takeover, and U.S. intervention in the country should be stopped.

South Africa has been "vilified and condemned" unfairly by the United Nations.

U.S. policy in Guatemala been self-serving and often detrimental to the country.

Those were some of the views expressed by members of a "mini-United Nations" panel composed of students and faculty members from foreign countries who discussed international affairs Thursday in the Varsity Theater. The discussion was conducted as part of International Week.

The people of El Salvador want to stop violence in their country "right now" with a leftist takeover and do not welcome U.S. intervention in the country, said Oscar Delgado, El Salvadoran representative on the panel.

Paul G. Meyer, the South African representative, said the United Nations has refused to acknowledge the great strides the South African government has made to improve equality between black and white persons in the country.

A panelist for Guatemala, Mario Salazar, said U.S. policy in Guatemala based on self-interest and "market mentality" is leaving the country poorer than it was before U.S. businesses began to operate there.

Mario Salasado, Mexican representative, expressed satisfaction that the Reagan administration may put more emphasis on the United States' relationship with Mexico.

Delgado said although El Salvadorans do not necessarily support Communism, they are willing to use the help of Communists or "whoever" to destroy the military, which he said has continually repressed the people.

Despite denials from the government, most of the victims in the war have been killed by government forces, he said, and indicated rightists and the government "are the same thing."

He said the government has become dominated by "a handful of wealthy land owners."

If, with the help of U.S. aid, the El Salvadoran government defeats guerrilla forces, the current conflict will just keep repeating itself, he said. "They may be able to stop the guerrillas for a little while, but later it will be the same thing all over again."

Meyer said the South African government "has removed many harmful and negative forms of distinction on the basis of skin color and continues to do so."

Griffin appointment nixed by ASBYU court justices

By MARK TRUNNELL
and DAVID SCHNEIDER
Universe Staff Writers

The ASBYU Supreme Court ruled early this morning the appointment of Attorney General Mark Griffin was invalid.

Griffin, who carries less than the required 8.5 credit hours necessary to be considered a full-time student, and hence a member of ASBYU, was appointed ASBYU attorney general by the ASBYU Executive Council on a 9-0 vote last month.

Chief Justice Dennis Judd, reading the court's decision, said, "It is the opinion of the court that the ASBYU constitution implies that all officers be members of ASBYU."

"The constitution requires members of ASBYU to be full-time students. . . ."

The court's opinion said that since BYU allows exceptions for last-semester seniors who need less than eight hours to fulfill graduation requirements, it would be permissible for the ASBYU Executive Council to draw up "reasonable" bylaws defining such exceptions pertaining to ASBYU officers.

"I think we've won a significant victory for seniors in my position," Griffin said. "All we have to do is call a meeting; I'll write up the bylaw and it'll be approved."

Griffin said his 9-0 approval showed he had the support of the executive council.

Plaintiff Daniel Porter said he would not be averse to reappointment of Griffin if the bylaws were changed to correct the previous situation.

Porter had charged Griffin's appointment as attorney general is in violation of ASBYU bylaws because Griffin is a part-time student.

"Policies and Procedures state clearly in two different spots that in order for a student to hold office at ASBYU, he has to be currently registered for the number of credit hours necessary to be a full-time student," said Porter prior to the hearing.

Griffin, who is preparing to graduate in April, centered his defense on university policies which grant exceptions in several areas to last-semester seniors.

City government

Changes proposed

By GAYLEN WEBB
Universe Staff Writer

A local citizens group recommended Provo pursue an alternate form of city government in a meeting Wednesday night at the City Center.

The meeting was called by the Provo Citizens Government Study Group, which has been meeting for the past four months to study Provo's present commission government and alternate forms.

The meeting's purpose was to determine potential support for a change.

Colleen Dixon, co-chairman of the group, said, "This is not in any way a reflection on the people serving in the system."

The meeting began with the group presenting its views and the conclusions of its study. After its presentations, the alternate forms of government were explained by State Sen. Karl Snow, R-Provo.

Until recently, Snow said, Utah law prescribed all first- and second-class cities must have a commission form of government.

This was changed by a Home Rule Charter developed by the Legislature that allows first, second and third-class cities to change their form of city government by election, he said.

Snow said the city must, by its own election, choose one of the optional forms of local government provided by the legislature.

The options to the commission government are the council-manager form, the council-mayor form with mandatory administrative manager and the council-manager form.

Snow said.

Snow stressed cities could do anything they want with the options under the charter.

The rest of the meeting was for citizens to voice their opinions. Twenty citizens responded, three favoring the commission form and 12 favoring a change to either a council-mayor or council-manager form. The rest said more study was needed.

"Provo has got to grow. Our present form of government is only popular with six percent of the cities in the United States," said Bliss Crandall, a Provo resident. "We need to have a good study and select the very best for Provo."

"It's the individuals who make the government," said Grant Larson, a Provo resident for the past 53 years. "It's the individuals who respond to the people. I'm in favor of the commission form we have at the present time."

Pilot course offered by Y club

The Flying Cougars Club is offering an accelerated private pilot ground course for anyone interested in learning how to fly.

The class will be taught by Eldon Corry and will meet every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday for an hour and a half in 130 JKB. Classes begin Tuesday.

The course will be offered on a non-credit basis. The tuition is $50, including the text. For more information or to pre-register call Vicki at ext. 6759.

The areas covered in the course satisfy the requirements of the Federal Aeronautics Administration examination for a private pilot's license.

The Flying Cougars Club's objectives are "to promote an interest in aviation, safety, fellowship and to have a good time," said member Rob Lee Rainey, a junior majoring in pre-law from Edmond, Okla.

Rainey said most people become involved in the Flying Cougars because they want to learn how to fly at a low price.

The club has 30 active members, but Rainey said if more students were involved group rates would be available.

The percentage of members who receive their pilot licenses through the club is low because the club doesn't have an official program.

Rainey said this is why the course is being offered.

If more students show an active interest in the club, the BYU administration might give the go-ahead for an official program for the Flying Cougars, said Rainey.

The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) requires 36 hours flying time to obtain a pilot's license, he said.

By joining the club, members are entitled to discounts at local flying schools, Rainey said.

Air search for missing aircraft continues in Utah mountains

By JAY EVENSEN
Universe Staff Writer

Rescuers continued to search the mountains of south-central Utah Thursday for six persons, including the parents of two BYU students, who have been missing since their Cherokee 6 aircraft left late last Saturday.

Utah Civil Air Patrol Cadet Lt. Evan Jackman said faint signals on the emergency location transmitter aboard the missing plane have been detected. However, he said the signals come in bursts every few seconds and rescue workers have been unable to pinpoint their origin.

The passengers aboard the missing plane were identified as Vern Smith, Warden, Wash., and his wife, parents of Shari Kay Smith and Mark Pratt Smith, both BYU students; Karl Smith, a brother; and Paul Sampson, Othello, Wash., and their wives.

The Smiths and their friends had been vacationing in the area when they were returning to Provo to pick up their younger daughter, whom they had left with a relative before returning to Washington.

CAP officials said the aircraft was last seen at 3 p.m. Saturday and is expected to arrive in Provo at 10 p.m.

CAP Lt. Marshall Scott said the craft dropped off the radar screen in the mountainous area near Escalante, Utah.

Jackman said snowfall in the area hampered rescue efforts on Thursday and grounded all but three of the search planes.

CAP Capt. Terry Olsen said there were 20 planes aiding in the search during the good weather on Wednesday. He said two crash sites were discovered, but they turned out to be old sites discovered several years ago.

He said the rescuers are following every possible lead in hopes of locating the aircraft. He said they had even received a call from a psychic who felt he knew the plane's whereabouts.

Olsen said the pilot, Vern Smith, did not file a flight plan, and this is making efforts to locate the plane "very very tough."

He said one of the rescuers is a man who has flown with Smith for 25 years, and is very familiar with his flying habits.

Olsen said he was optimistic about the possibility of survivors because he knew Smith to be an exceptional pilot. "He could land on a postage stamp, as they say," he said. "I'm pretty sure he had the ability to bring the plane down safely."

He said rescuers will continue search efforts through the night.

Two accreditation teams to evaluate college of Education program, facilities

By ANN STARKS
Universe Staff Writer

Fourteen members of the National Council for Accreditation of Teacher Education will be in Provo until Wednesday to evaluate the college of Education between Tuesday and Thursday.

Sunday and March 14.

Ross, administrative assistant to the dean of the college. When they leave, 26 members of a Utah state accreditation team will arrive.

The teams will evaluate all college programs and facilities and interview students, graduates and faculty, said Mrs. Ross.

Four large volumes, covering all department programs and faculty accomplishments, have been prepared for the teams, she said.

The accreditation teams will note students' progress by talking with students in each program at various levels. They will also talk with principals of schools where students have trained and been placed.

The teams are scheduled to tour the new Oakridge School and Clinics Building, facilities used by the department of educational psychology.

Some schools will not hire graduates from an unaccredited college, Mrs. Ross said.

"I wouldn't want to be a list that wasn't accredited," she said.

More than 90 percent of the graduates from BYU's College of Education are placed in the field, which is much higher than the national average, she said.

"We're trying to do what the prophet has asked us to do — be the best college on earth," Mrs. Ross said.

She said the college stresses academic excellence and compliance to the laws of God.

Hamilton captures figure skating title

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — American champion Scott Hamilton beat the pressure and friendly rival David Santee to win the men's title Thursday night at the World Figure Skating Championships.

Santee won the silver medal for America's best finish in a single world skating event since 1956. Igor Bobbin of the Soviet Union was third.

Hamilton, 22, of Bowling Green, Ohio, skated near flawlessly as the next to last competitor. He hit all six of his triple jumps but fell once on a routine turning maneuver.

When the spunky, little Hamilton finished his five-minute free-skate, the appreciative Hartford Civic Center Coliseum crowd showered him with a standing ovation. Then the judges tipped their hats with a string of 5.9s and 5.8s, the best marks of the night.

That left it to Santee, who had beaten Hamilton in eight of their 11 meetings, but lost their last encounter at the national championships in San Diego.

Santee, who was in first before the free-skate, only needed to beat Hamilton's marks on five of the nine judges, and the elusive title was his.

But the 23-year-old veteran from Park Ridge, Ill., faltered on his opening triple jump and although he skated confidently from then on the judges weren't overly impressed.

Santee, who had finished second in four national championships and had never won a medal in five previous trips to the worlds, received mostly 5.7s and 5.8s out of a possible 6.0. He lost to Hamilton on seven judges cards and tied him on two. The near-sellout crowd bowed the marks.

At the awards ceremony, Hamilton and Santee hugged and gave each other high-five slaps of the hands. The United States had one winner, but two champions.

Before the pressure-packed free-skate, Hamilton had said: "I just want to skate good. I want my 5.9s and a standing ovation."

He got his wish, and the audience was treated to royal skating performances all night. Five of the 20 skaters were showered with standing ovations, including Brian Orser of Canada, who executed the first triple axel in world competition. He finished sixth.

Performances to determine national trip

Friday night's double-dual gymnastics tournament against both the men and women of fifth-ranked Oregon and just the women from California-Berkeley, may determine if Masahiko Kinjo and the BYU women's team will be invited to the nationals.

Coach Wayne Young said sixth-ranked Kinjo should have no problem qualifying for the nationals because "he is that good of an athlete."

Young pointed out Oregon has the fifth-ranked all-around gymnast in the nation, Kelly Crumley. "Kinjo and Crumley will definitely have a battle," Young said.

BYU's eighth-ranked women's team will compete against Oregon and California-Berkeley.

Coach Debbie Hill said she thought this tournament could secure them a position in nationals. "We hope this meet with the home crowd can give us the energy and high score we need to guarantee us a place in the nationals," she said.

Both the women's and men's teams are feeling very confident about Friday's tournament.

"I think we can beat Oregon. Although there is an eight-point spread between our average scores, it doesn't reflect our team's strength," Young said.

"We haven't lost to anyone who is ranked lower than us all season. Right now we are getting it all together," he said.

Hill said the women are really working as a team. "We don't have a 'star athlete; we have a good solid team, which represents the school well," she said. Hill emphasized their goal as a team was to get to the nationals, "but as coaches we are stressing it is more important to be a participant than a No. 1 team."

Hill said since so much gymnastics will be going on, everything will be organized and well scheduled. "It'll be a good and fun event," she said.

Spring football begins today

It was only 11 weeks ago the Cougars were pulling off the "miracle win" at the Holiday Bowl, and already they are back bumping heads on the practice field in spring workouts starting today.

Along with the start of spring practices, the coaching assignments have been announced. Directing new areas of coaching responsibility will be Fred Whittingham as assistant head coach and defensive coordinator; Roger French, as offensive coordinator; and Dick Felt, special-teams coordinator.

Rounding out the other coaching areas are newly appointed coach Ted Tollner, quarterback; Norm Chow, wide receivers; Garth Hall, running backs; Tom Ramage, defensive line; French and Mel Olsen, offensive line; Whittingham, linebackers; and Felt, defensive backs.

Spring practices have two main purposes, according to head football coach LaVell Edwards.

"We use the practices to look at the players and find the ones we can count on to start for us during the regular season," he said. "We also use it to teach techniques and skills to the younger kids and help involve last year's freshmen with the varsity."

The practices during the spring workouts will be heavier than those during the regular season, according to Edwards.

"We have a lot more scrimmaging and contact during spring," he said. "You don't have time to do that during the regular season when you're worrying about getting ready for a game."

During the spring workouts the Cougars will hold open practices and anyone who wishes is free to watch at anytime.

Scorecard

BASEBALL TEAM LOSES

The BYU baseball team lost to the University of Arizona Wednesday 4-1 in Tucson.

Although BYU committed only one error, the runs just wouldn't come against Arizona, the defending NCAA champions. The loss drops the Cougars to a 5-10 record.

The Cougars play UTEP today in El Paso, and New Mexico on Saturday at Las Cruces.

LACROSSE SCRIMMAGE

Saturday at 9:30 a.m., the BYU lacrosse team will have its annual blue-and-white scrimmage at Stover Field. The match is a preview of the upcoming season. It will be a warmup game for its trip to California to play perennial powers UCLA and USC.

INTRAMURAL CANCELED

Due to the BYU-Utah game, all intramural basketball games scheduled for Saturday from 1 p.m. on are canceled. The games won't be rescheduled.

CROSS COUNTRY RACE

Fort Utah State Park will be the site for a cross country race March 28. All winners will receive 35 medals from the Sojourners Running Club. Registration will be from noon to 12:45 p.m., and the race will start at 1 p.m.

WAC receives Y letter

DENVER (AP) — A spokesman at the Western Athletic Conference headquarters in Denver says WAC commissioner Joe Kearney has received a letter from BYU regarding incidents at the BYU-Wyoming game last week but it is not a formal complaint.

"We got a letter detailing their version of what happened and that's about all we've gotten," said WAC Information Director Nurdy Jensen. "I also know the commissioner has talked to people at both schools."

The letter referred to the behavior of University of Wyoming fans at a game against BYU in Laramie Feb. 26.

Lady netters to face LSU in semifinals

The BYU women's tennis team will meet Louisiana State today in semifinal round action in the BYU Women's Tennis Invitational at 2 p.m. on the indoor tennis courts.

In other semifinal action, Arizona State will face the University of California-Berkeley at 1 p.m. at the Sherwood Hill Racquet Club.

The tournament finals are slated for 9 a.m. Saturday on the BYU indoor courts.

Cougar coach, Ann Valentine said BYU's match against Texas Christian Thursday, 7-1, was a competitive match. "The scores of our match are not indicative of the match."

We had a slow start. We came around in the second sets, but we played our first sets very tight," Valentine said.

"When a team is not playing as well as they normally do and still come around to win, that's a good team."

BYU's No. 2 doubles were rotated because Heather Ludloff was sick. Tracy Tanner played with Charlene Hill, beating TSU 6-0, 7-6.

Other doubles were Susan Pendo and Debbie Robb defeating Lori Nelson and Angela Barzlen. The Cougars only loss was their No. 3 doubles, Karen Mulvehall and Tina Holding, losing 6-4, 5-7, 6-4 to Lynn Davis and Barb Vondenlux.

In BYU's single play, Debbie Robb beat Lila Hirsch, 7-6, 6-1; Charlene Murphy drowned Angela Barzen, 6-3, 6-3; Tracy Tanner blitzed Cynthia Hill, 6-0, 6-3; Lonley Tanner beat Barb Vondenlux, 7-6, 6-3 and Lani Wilcox outworked Lynn Davis, 6-3, 6-3.

Louisiana State overwhelmed Utah 7-2 yesterday. LSU won all their singles matches and their No. 2 doubles against Utah. Texas Christian and Utah will compete today at 9:00 a.m. on the BYU indoor courts.

Arizona State, ranked 18, upset No. 20 Colorado State in a surprise match. "Colorado was seeded second due to beating No. 12, UC Berkeley last month at the Colorado Invitational," Valentine said.

Colorado will be competing against Texas A&M at 9:00 a.m. at the Sherwood Hills Racquet Club today.

UC Berkeley downed No. 16 Texas A&M, 7-2. "UC Berkeley is a very strong contender in this tournament," Valentine said.

Season finale pits 2 rivals

By ANNE THORNTON
Universe Sports Editor
 Saturday's game was picked as the game that would decide the conference championship.
 But BYU's loss to Wyoming last weekend dropped the Cougars from championship race. So the tie at the Marriott Center between the Cougars and Utes should be mild and unimportant, right?
 Not necessarily.
 For one, the game will decide if it is the outright winner of the C, or whether it must share the crown with Wyoming.
 Or another, a win over the ninth-ranked Utes may boost BYU's chances for an invitation to the AA finals. And, if by chance Wyoming loses against 2-12 Air Force, BYU will tie for second.
 (I think our record is good enough for a good consideration with AA," said Frank Arnold, coach of the 21-6 Cougars. "A win would give us a better seed.")
 Although the Cougars have already been invited to the NIT tournament, Arnold said the NCAA is more prestigious and he's hoping that bid.
 The game will be overflowing with fans, including four of the five players on the All-WAC team. For the final time in season play, the two Dannels will meet—the now-famous Danny Ainge and Danny Vranes, who will probably make every All-America team selected this season.

 Ainge continues to lead WAC scoring with a 24.6 average. There will also be All-WAC selections Tom Chambers of Utah and BYU's Fred Roberts, who will add sparkle of their own.
 "We've played some awfully good games against some awfully good teams, but I'm still not convinced we haven't played our best game or games yet," Arnold said. "I hope they'll begin Saturday."
 And don't forget this game will pit two rivals in front of 23,000 fans. "Since we can't be champions, now all that matters is the rivalry," said Steve Trumbo, who is still second in WAC rebounds with a 10.9 average.
 Arnold said the fans will make the difference. "The crowd during the New Mexico game was the greatest I had seen in six years," he said. "I hope that was just a warm-up for Saturday."
 Roberts said the pressure will be off. "We're going out there and we're going to have some fun," he said.

Women seeking 4th region title

Defending Region VII champion BYU will attempt to win its fourth regional title in a row at this week's AIAW Region VII Basketball Championships at Las Cruces, N.M., Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

The Cougar women tied Utah for the championship of the Western Division of the Inter-mountain Athletic Conference, both teams with 9-1 league records. But the Cougars lost a toss of the coin to the Utes, and enter the region tournament as the division's second-place team.

BYU opened with an 8 p.m. Thursday contest against Weber State, a team it has defeated 80-71 and 101-94 this season. Weber State finished third in the Mountain Division. Colorado, Mountain Division champion, meets the winner of the BYU-WSC game at 8 tonight. Other action pitted New Mexico State against Colorado State at 6 p.m. Thursday, with the winner going against Utah at 6 tonight.

The championship game is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Saturday. Last year, BYU hosted the region meet and won it by defeating Utah State 105-85, Colorado 101-91, and Utah 94-75.

Wade Trophy

nominee Jackie McBride, one of the top 20 scorers in the nation, leads the Cougars with a 22.7 average and is second on her team with 7.3 rebounds a game. Her game highs this season have been 41 points and 12 rebounds, both against Washington.

Leading rebounder for BYU is Jenny Cox with 8.2 a game. She averages 15.5 points.

Other Cougars averaging in double figures are Valerie Cravens at 11.3 and Jeanette Weston at 10.0. Weston leads the team in free-throw shooting with 78 percent.

BYU centers Lori Vreeken and Kerri Connolly provide much of the offensive punch for the Cougars. Vreeken had her high game of 25 points last Saturday at Colorado State to boost her average to 8.5. Connolly is BYU's highest percentage field-goal shooter at 55 percent and averages 7.6 points.

Medical questions, answers

Sprained ankle needs ice pack

By DR. CLOYD C. HOPFENS and ROY HENDRICKS

Q. What is the best way to take care of a sprained ankle?

A. A sprained ankle is the forcible wrenching of the joint with partial ruptures of the ligaments, but does not involve the bones.

As soon as a sprain occurs, ice packs should be applied or the ankle should be immersed in cold water. This will help to prevent the swelling and decrease the pain. Thereafter, keep the ankle elevated as and will also help some to control the soft tissue swelling.

Severe sprains where the ankle joint is unstable may require a short leg cast for a couple of weeks.

Catches are required only if weight bearing is not tolerated. It takes four to six weeks for healing, but an ankle should feel much improvement in most cases in about two weeks.

Q. I've been jogging almost every morning now, and now I have shin splints. How do I treat them?

A. Shin splints from jogging are a result of strain to muscles that have not had much exercise previously. Jogging is something that should be done on a gradual basis and the pace varied to include walking and running on the shoes. On a gradual basis, the muscles on the anterior leg will be strengthened so as not to suffer strain.

The best way to treat shin splints is by abstaining from the strenuous activity that caused them. Applying hot packs, cold packs or both for 10-15 minutes several times a day may also be helpful.

Seated at the piano, Distinguished Faculty Lecturer Merrill Bradshaw highlighted his discourse on composing with intermittent demonstrations on the keyboard.

Bradshaw outlines art of composing

True artistry may be more discovery than invention, as the artist remembers particular works from pre-mental life, suggested Merrill Bradshaw, BYU music professor and resident composer, Thursday night at the Distinguished Faculty Lecture.

Bradshaw, recipient of this year's Distinguished Faculty Award, spoke on the subject "Genesis of a Concerto," outlining the creative process behind his "Concerto for Violin and Orchestra" which was performed after his comments.

There are several myths, explained Bradshaw, harbored by the general public concerning the creative process. Labeling them the "fortuitous inspiration fable," the "sentimental naturalist neurosis," the "divine stenographer pretense," and the "myth of the birds and the bees and the notes," Bradshaw indicated that, contrary to notions made popular by Hollywood, composition is neither an act of serendipity nor romantic inclination.

Although the creative process is often a spiritual one, Bradshaw stressed that the composer does not merely take "harmonic dictation from on high." With that approach, Bradshaw said he would be "as effective as Oliver Cowdery was in attempting to translate the Book of Mormon."

The concerto was later performed by the BYU Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Dr. Ralph Laycock with special guest Elizabeth Matesky at the violin.

Bradshaw had written the work in memory of Miss Matesky's father, noted violinist and teacher.

Ball events

Here's a schedule of events for the Mormon Arts Ball in the Harris Fine Arts Center tonight.

The pre-ball concert in the deJong Concert Hall from 8 to 9 p.m. will feature Heather Young and Cam Clark. Dignitaries of the ball will be presented at the Grand March and the Intercollegiate Knights traditionally light the "Y." Dancing music for the evening will be provided by the Symphony and the Jazz Ensemble.

The Mime Club will perform at 9:45, 10:30, 11:15 and midnight in P-201 HFAC.

One-act plays will be presented in the Nelke Experimental Theater. The plays are "A Girl Who Blushes," 10 p.m.; "The Dark Bench," 10:30 p.m.; "The Elevator," 11 p.m.; and "The Blade of the Strangers' Gun," 11:30 p.m.

The Margetts Arena Theater will be the stage for the Whittlin' Whistlin' Brigade from 10 to 11 p.m. and for the Professional Actors' Workshop from 11 p.m. to 12:15 a.m.

Feature films will be shown in B-203 HFAC. "Occurrence at Owl Creek" will play at 9:45 p.m., "Why Man Creates" at 10:30 p.m. and midnight and "Golden Fish" and "Dream of the Wild Horses" at 11:15 p.m.

The following dance companies will perform in the deJong Concert Hall: Dancers Company, 10 p.m.; the ballroom company, 10:30 p.m.; the theater ballet company, 11 p.m. and the folk dancers, 11:30 p.m.

James Arrington will be featured in the Pardee Theater in segments from "The Parley Family Reunion" at 9:45, 10:45 and 11:45 p.m.

In the Secured Gallery, literature competition winners will present readings from 9:45 p.m. to 12:45 a.m. The musical composition contest winners will perform in the Madsen Recital Hall from 9:45 p.m. to 12:45 a.m.
